

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a method and system to reduce storage in an interprocedural analysis solver. In one embodiment, local graphs are pruned. The local graphs represent local problems, which correspond to separately compilable components in a software program. Each of the local graphs has edges and vertices. Each edge has a transfer function. Each vertex has a value. Values of the local graph form a lattice under a partial ordering.

104240-0430